"My daughter, Mrs. Barlow, inherited more than $100,000 a few years ago from her grandfather. Dr. Barlow regaled himself with a great deal of it, and had a yacht upon which he entertained his friends. About a year ago he took my daughter out in a carriage, telling her he was going to bring her to my house. He took her to the lunatic asplum at Flatbush, where he left her. When I demanded to know where my daughter was, he brought her back to me. Afterward he had her in a sanitarium at Woodhaven, from which she was also discharged. My daughter was never insane, yet the manner in which she has been treated is enough to drive her out of her mind. My firm belief is that Mrs. Earlow is missing because she was atraid she was going to be sent back to the asplum."

A SUN reporter saw Dr. Barlow at his nome last night. He said he had not heard anything of his wife.

"My impression is that there are several people who know where my wife is," said the Doctor, as his eyes filled with tears. "Her four children have done nothing else but cry since she went away. They want her to come home. My wife had everything she could wish for, and the assertions of her mother about her being foreibly detained in the asylum are false. Mrs. Barlow was attacked with the grip about two years ago, which developed into melancholia. She tried to commit suicide by jumping from a window. I was advised to have her sent to a sanitarium and had physicians from the State Board of Lunacy examine her. They decided she ought to be placed in an asylum, and, as I knew she could get excellent treatment at Flatbush. I took her there. From there she was transferred to a private sanitarium at Woodhaven, where Dr. Coombs reluctantly let her go upon the request of her relatives. Unless my mother-in-law ceases her talk about me, I may have something to say before long. I love my wife, and her surroundings were of the happiest kind. I want her home for her children's sake. I firmly believe that her relatives know where she is. When she came back from Staten Island on Friday I was out making professional calls, My wife came as far as the front door, and then said she was going to visit her mother. She had only twenty-five cents with her, and I was told she did not reach her mother's house."

MR. CAMERON WOULD NOT STAND.

The Second Time the Rev. Mr. Tyndall Or dered Him to Leave the Church He Went, There has been another row in Elliott F.

Shepard's Broome Street Tabernacle. This time it was because Theological Student Cameron of the Union Seminary refused to stand up in Sunday school when ordered to do so by Pastor C. N. Tyndall. Pastor Tyndall told the story of the trouble to a Sun reporter yesterday afternoon. He said:

Cameron was assigned to duty as a mis sionary in this church by Dr. Schauffler. He is paid to come here, and he has got to obey the rules or stay away. During the singing of a hymn last Sunday afternoon at Sunday schoo in the Tabernacie I called on everybody, both teachers and scholars, to stand. All stood but five or six, and these were around this Cameron. I again said that everybody must tand, and every one but Cameron rose to his feet. I then called on Cameron by name to fest. I then called on Cameron by name to stand up and he still kept his seat. I thought he might be deaf, and I called in a loud voice. 'Stand up, Mr. Cameron.'

"Mr. Cameron still paid no attention to my command, and I saw that he meant to ignore it. I was determined to be obeyed, and I said: 'Cameron, you must stand up or leave this church.' He paid no attention to this order and I had again to order him from my church. The second time he was ordered out he put on his coat and walked out, and I have not heard of him since."

his coat and walked out, and I have not heard of him since."

"Why were you so anxious to have Mr. Cameron shand up?" asked the reporter.

"That's my rule, and I intend to see it carried out by theological students as well as anybody else. I want it understood that if any other young fellow is sent down here from the seminary he has got to stand up or leave. That is all there is of it."

Several members of the congregation were standing about while Pastor Tyndall was telling his story, and all heartily endorsed his etatements and even his gesticulations by nodding in accord at the end of every sentence and at every motion of his hands and arms.

Student Cameron says that he did not stand because he thought he was attending divine service, and not a drill or pantomine. Yosterday he assisted Missionary Irvine, who was recently banished from the Broome Street Tabernacle by Paster Tyndall, at the Church of the Sea and Land.

Gave Her Child a Fatal Dose,

KINGSTON, N. Y., March 19.-Last fall John Blake of Hagadorn's Mills claimed to have married the Widow Parkis, whose husband died about two years ago. When she went to live with Blake she took her three-year-old son with her. Ever since the couple have lived together the boy's life has been one of almost incessant torture at their hands. A few days ago, it is alleged, the mother wentto the village drug store and purchased a quantity of laudanum, and that night gave the child a teaspoonful of the drug. The child died in a few hours. OUR DEPLETED BANK RESERVES.

A cessation of gold shipments caused by the high rates of interest for money, together with some small deposits of gold on account of out-of-town banks which desired supplies of currency, have permitted the stock of gold in the Treasury to increase a little, so that on Saturday it was $104,580,235, against its low-est point of $100,982,410 on March 9. To those who retain a superstitious respect for the arbitrary $100,000,000 limit established Secretary Manning, the margin of safety now shown will probably be comforting, but, considering that Secretary Sherman originally fixed the limit at $138,400,000, or 40 per cent of the $346,000,000 of old legal tenders, and that to these have since been added $130,000,000 of Treasury notes also redeemable in coin, it would seem that their fears ought not to subside until the so-called redemption fund has been increased to $190,-000,000 at least.

It will be interesting to observe, by the way. at the end of this month, whether Secretary Carlisle, in his first official monthly statemen of the condition of the national debt, will adhere to the practice introduced by Secretary Manning on his accession to office in 1885, and continue the deduction from his availa ble cash of the $100,000,000 gold which Mr. Manning and his successors have reguarly treated as a special fund held exclusively for the redemption of the old legal tenders. Things have changed considerably in the eight years which have elapsed since Mr. Manning became Secretary of the Treasury. He received from his predecessor a surplus so arge that to diminish its apparent magnitude he arbitrarily took out of it not only his $100,000,000 gold redemption fund, but also $31,500,000 of fractional and minor coin which he declared were "unavailable for reduction of the debt." This still left him a working balance of $22,250,025, which, in 1880, swelled to over $60,000,000, and led to purchases of per cent, bonds, in advance of their maturity. at 130 or thereabouts. On Feb. 28 last, with the fractional and minor coin put back as available, and with the addition of some $22, 500,000 of cash deposited by national banks to redeem retired circulation, which was covered into the Treasury by the Sherman act, Secre tary Foster's balance was only $24,128,087. and there were no end of appropriations awaiting payment.

It is quite evident, upon a review of the events of the past few weeks, that the mere depletion of the Treasury gold reserve would have had comparatively little effect in depresaing the stock market, had it not been accompanied by heavy drafts upon our city bank reserves, and by a consequent contraction of he supply of money to lend. It is true that the stringency thus produced brought to light weaknesses in many corporations, which had been successfully concealed, and thus discouraged purchases of their stocks, but this was only a subordinate factor in the general process. The $20,000,000, or thereabouts, in gold, which has been drawn from the Treasury since Jan. 1. was as useless where it lay as if it had never been taken out of the mines, but the additional millions which our banks have contributed both to the Treasury and to supply the European demand, have reduced their lending power enormously, and on top of it have come calls for local tenders from their country correspondents which have contracted their reserve of that kind of money since Jan 22 to the amount of $13,500,000. The resulhas been that the amount of lawful money held by the banks, which on Jan. 22 was $142,520, 500 and on Feb. 11 was $140,177,500, had fallen last Saturday to $110,529,400, and their loans, which on Jan. 22 were $447,074,100, stood at $409,304,200.

It is also to be remarked that, while our bank reserves have thus shrunk enormously since Jan. 22, the shrinkage has not greatly exceeded the expansion of the first three weeks of the year, the reserves on Dec. 31, 1802, having been $117,086,000, or only $1,457,500 more than they were on Saturday. The prices of many leading stocks also, low as they seem by comparison with those which prevailed a few weeks ago, are not much lower are exceptions, indeed, but these are due to special causes. The bankruptcy of the Read ing Railroad Company carried down the stock both of that company and of the New York and New England Railroad Company, New York Central has been depressed by the proposed increase of the company's capital, the industrials by revelations of bad management in some of them from which they have all suffered, the coal stocks by the reduction of the price of coal, and so in other cases. All this demonstrates once more what had been over and over again demonstrated al ready, and what is familiar to every experienced observer of financial affairs, that plenty of money makes prices high and a scarcity of it makes them low. It is not always remembered, though, that "money" means credit as well as eash, and that credits enormously supplement the functions of cash, and are as efficient as cash in promoting a rise, while a collapse of credits is equally efficacious in producing a fall. Our fellow citizens at the West and the South clamor continually for an enlargement of the volume of the national currency, rightly conceiving that this enlargement will tend to increase the prices of their agricultural products. They do not see, however, that it is very easy, by destroying credits, not only to counteract the effect of an increase of eash, but to overbalance it. Thus, although the Sherman act is steadily adding $4,000. 000 per month to the quantity of curlenders of credits so much as to produce, as we see, a shrinkage of prices. Taken by itself. the emission of nearly $4,000,000 per month of the legal tender notes given for the purchase of silver bullion ought to result in inflation, and it would do so, were it not for the dread which it has inspired of a coming sus pension of gold payments. British capitalists. particularly, have called home a large amount of their old investments in this country, and are chary of making new ones. This example is followed as far as it can be by the capitalists of New York and other Eastern cities, and hence the West and the South find difficulty in getting either credit or currency with which to do their business and develop their natural resources. Even here, in New York, our banks. with a reservo in lawful money, as I have already mentioned, of $116,529,400, have reduced their loans to $409,304,200, whereas on Dec. 31, 1802, with a reserve only $1,457,500 greater, they were loaning $437,722,000, or $28,417,800 more than they are leaning now. On the other hand, the cry here at the East for a repeal of the Sherman act, proceeding from a belief that the repeal will at once restore confidence and put prices up. is equally irrational with that for the continuance of the net and for an enlargement of its operation Nothing will have any permanent effect in dispelling the fears of investors but a complete cessation of the clamor for the free coinage of silver which accompanies the resistance to the repeal of the Sherman act and which perpetually threatens the maintenance of gold standard. It is Almost certain that a majority of both houses of the new Congress are against stopping, or even restricting, the present purchases of silver, and, unless all signs fail, next winter will see the passage of a free coinage bill, which, though it will probably be vetoed by President Cleveland, will keep alive the present fears in regard to the future of our currency. In comparison with a Free Silver act, the Sherman act is a conservative measure, and, on the whole, we ought to be thankful that we have to endure nothing worse. That it drives gold out of the country is true, but in this respect it acts slowly, and, after Europe has taken from us a few millions more of the metal, its power to absorb it will be much lessened, while the growth of this country's business and the increased uso of cash in the place of credits in he agricultural districts tends to reduce the inflative effect of the additional currency. Clearly, if the Sherman act were to be repealed immediately, the cessation of the issue of Treasury notes caused by the repeal would lead to a gradual contraction, which, in its way, would be as injurious to high prices as the recent shipments of gold have been.

The present stringency has, as usual, been aggravated by the custom of our city banks to attract deposits from country banks by is that when the supply of money is in excess of the demand, the depository banks are induced, for the sake of earning the interes they agree to pay on country bank balances to lend money freely at low rates and thus to atimulate speculation. As soon, however, as money is wanted urgently here, the country banks want it too, and thus the stringency is greatly increased. It is true, that if city banks refused to pay interest on country bank deposits, the country banks could lend their money directly to borrowers here. Still, if country bank officer had to take himself the risk and responsibility of making loans in this market he would do it cautiously and to a much less extent than the full amount of the onlance which he now leaves with confidence in a good city bank. At all events it seems as though the rate of interest paid on country bank balances might better be made to vary with the market for money, and not be fixed as it is now.

A more cheerful feeling is reported as having prevailed on Saturday in the money mar-ket and on the Stock Exchange, and prices showed symptoms of a tendency to advance That they will advance somewhat in the course of the week is likely. The feeling of depres sion which leads people to sell things instead of buying them has lasted so long, now, that it is time for it to begin to die out, and unless some new scare is invented to revive it a more cheerful disposition ought to take its place Some of the active stocks, too, have very prob ably been depressed below their true level by short sales and an attempt by the sellers to cover will naturally put them up. Any greator general rise after the severe losses which buyers have lately had to suffer is, however, at present not to be expected. Confidence is a plant of alow growth, and the conditions now prevailing are not well calculated to hasten its maturity. MATTHEW MARSHALL.
